Brand New Book  Print on Demand .The current book analyzes the effects macroeconomic variables on inflation in of Sudan. The selected data set was from 1990-2008. During that time, there were significant changes in macroeconomic policies that had strong impacts on the performance of the Sudanese economy. A strong wave of hyperinflation was recorded during the beginning years of the 1990s. That was followed by relative stabilization and less inflation rates. Similar changes in the monetary policies were observed. Part of the 1990, implemented package of policies to solve the shortage of foreign exchange problem provoked increasing the supply of domestic currency. Free market economy was adopted through liberalizing trade and boosted exerting efforts to promote exports, besides adopting encouraging policies for the benefit of increasing productivity. The results reveal that there are negative effects of some macroeconomic variables on inflation, specifically GDP. Thus, GDP had the greatest effect on inflation. Money supply also positively affected inflation, which reveals possible increases, governmental deficit financing, and printing banknotes. The coefficient of determination ($R^2=94.0$) verifies the model results. There was also a positive but weak and...
