NUMBERS XXIII. 23: ACCOIIDING TO THIS TIME IT SHALL BE SAID OF JACOB AND OF ISKAEL, WHAT HATH GOD WROUGHT! The narrative, in which this passage occurs, exhibits two picked men engaged in earnest co-operation, and yet, in some respects, with very different feelings, for the accomplishment of the same evil purpose. The people of Israel, on their march from Egypt to Canaan, became, to some extent, the terror of the nations through which they passed. While they were encamped in the plains of Moab, Balak, the king of that country, became alarmed for the safety of his nation; and forthwith despatched messengers to Balaam, a noted diviner, with a request that he would come without delay, and curse the hostile people that were hovering upon his borders. The message was accompanied by valuable presents, and this, to a man whose ruling passion seems...
