In such cases it is both a food which is immediately available to the tissues, and a mild and harmless stimulant to digestion. Light clarets, Rhine wines, or even Burgundy, often may be advantageously permitted with midday and evening meals. Distilled liquors have a much narrower field of usefulness in the dietetics of tuberculosis, but are permissible in certain cases, when alcohol is indicated, and the more bulky forms are ill borne. When they are used, they should be well diluted. The standard food requirements for tuberculous invalids must be determined by further thorough studies of metabolism. Having acquired more accurate data, it will be possible to meet the food requirements, and at the same time to avoid the dangerous error of over-feeding. G. E.
